SAC "SPOTS" HOLD

The Strategic Air Command, which had been threatened with loss of its "spot" promotions for outstanding crews, has been told that these advancements may be continued.

The Pentagon notified General Thomas S. Power, SAC C-in-C, that the presently authorized number of "spots" may be retained with the understanding, however, that they can be recalled should the Air Force require the vacancies in the future.

SecDef Wilson Opens Unification's New Decade As First Began— Budget Cuts "Must"; Manpower Slash Certain; Pay A Problem

Editorial Comment, Page 10
10 Year Review, Pages 11, 32

SECRETARY of Defense Charles E. Wilson, though a short-termier, will find it impossible to stack arms until his successor, Mr. Neil H. McElroy, takes over in October as the Pentagon's sixth chief.

First and foremost, Secretary Wilson must take whatever crash action is necessary to get defense spending to a $38 billion level. That's about $2 billion below the current level, even after previously announced cuts.

No person to leave for another responsibility that is his, Secretary Wilson is seen certain in the next two weeks to issue important new orders affecting procurement and manpower in all the Services.

The departing Secretary undoubtedly will restate his belief—possibly even issue a directive—that the Services can cut manpower by the end of this fiscal year to 2,500,000, without endangering national security.

He is expected to order the Services to eliminate some headquarters organizations and generally to reduce overhead personnel. New procurement stretch-outs and cancellations can scarcely be avoided.

Another major "wrap-up" decision concerns the Intermediate Range Ballistic Missile program. The Secretary frequently has indicated he thinks it is possible to "marry" various components of the Air Force Thor and Army Jupiter IRBM's. He has also said many times that only one land-based IRBM will be built.

This week, Secretary Wilson took time out from his priority tasks to award cer-

LT. GEN. SAMUEL E. ANDERSON, USAF, (left) Commander of the Air Research and Development Command, is welcomed to Headquarters Tactical Air Command by General O. P. Weyland, TAC Commander. General Anderson visited Langley AFB, Va., for a one-day briefing on TAC's mission and future requirements.

Army Hopes For 90% Promotions

Army officials said this week it is hoped that fiscal '58 officer promotions will be 90 per cent or more of those originally planned, despite cuts in manpower.

That would mean more than 10,000 advancements.

They stressed, however, that final decisions cannot be made until late-year manpower studies are completed by the

Navy Chooses 830 For Commander; This Doubles Number Picked Last Year

A NAVY selection board has named 830 lieutenant commanders — more than twice the number chosen last year — for promotion to three-stripe rank.

The total includes 44 active duty Reservists and four WAVES. The women officers are Lieutenant Commanders Etta B. Kitchen, Mary K. Bonds, Geraldine F. Twining and Viola B. Sanders.

The board, headed by RADM. Elmer E. Yeomans, Deputy Commander, Naval Striking and Support Forces, Southern Europe, chose 695 unrestricted Line and 135 restricted Line officers.

The Regular selections include 682 from the zone, which extends from LCdr. James L. Kerr, Signal No. 9,115, through LCdr. John T. Goodwin, Signal 10,436, in the 1 Jan. 1957 Register.

The board chose 40 Regulars from above the zone. No officers were selected from below the zone.

Both the senior and the anchor men in the promotion zone were named for

Marine Board Picks Seven Colonels For One-Star; Fewest In Four Years

A MARINE Corps selection board has picked seven colonels—the smallest number to be chosen in four years—for advancement to one-star rank.

In making its selections of unrestricted officers, the board, headed by Lt. Gen. Merrill B. Twining, Commandant, Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va., named five colonels from a 38-officer zone and one from below the zone. The passover rate is 86.9 per cent.

Last year's board chose five of 35 officers from within the zone, two from below the zone and three from above the zone—a total of 10.

The Fiscal Year 1956 and 1955 boards selected 13 colonels for increased rank.

In addition to the six unrestricted colonels named this year, the board chose one Supply Duty Officer, Col. Paul R. Tyler, position 195 on the 1 Jan. Combined Lineal List.

There was no established zone for SDO's. The board considered all supply officers with three years' service in grade. There were 24 who fell into this category. Since there was no official SDO zone, SDO officers not selected are not considered to have been passed over.

Colonels John P. Condon and Frank C. Tharin are the only two pilots selected. There were 16 Naval Aviators in the

WAC Tested For Missile Battery Billets In 21 Army Air Defense Command

THE Army has launched a test to find out if women soldiers can help man anti-aircraft artillery units, including NIKE guided missile batteries.

A test program is underway at Ft. Meade, Md., in which WAC will serve as crewmen with the previously all-male 25th AAA Brigade.

They are slated for duties in connection with radar detection and tracking.

Army officials say the only other similar assignment for women soldiers occurred during WWII when 10 officers and 200 enlisted women served in operational and clerical billets with two special composite AAA batteries.

If the Meade test proves successful, additional WAC could be assigned to anti-aircraft artillery and missile units throughout the United States.

LAFAYETTE SALUTE—The famous French hero of the Revolutionary War was honored by high ranking dignitaries from both France and the U. S. at the Presidio of San Francisco in ceremonies celebrating the 200th anniversary of his birth. Pictured during the ceremonies are Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, USN, left, and Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, USA, Sixth Army Commander. Also attending were French Ambassador to the U. S. Herve Alphand, and M. Robert Luc, French Consul General.

Col. Beck Leads First Snark Missile Sqdn.

The first Snark guided missile squadron will be activated and assigned to the Strategic Air Command late this year.

The unit, 500 officers and men strong, will be led by Col. Richard W. Beck. He is currently assigned to SAC's Directorate of Operations.

The Snark, a high-altitude jet-propelled intercontinental missile, is capable of carrying an atomic warhead.

Squadron personnel are undergoing training at Northrop Aircraft Company's plant in Hawthorne, California.

The Air Force did not designate a site for the new missile unit.

SAC officials emphasized that missile units will be located so as to reduce noise and to insure that the missiles, if ever fired, will not pass over heavily populated areas.

Plans call for no missiles to be launched from operational sites except in event of war.

Missile crews will practice actual firings at an established range such as Patrick AFB, Fla.

Lt. Col. McGee Gyro Officer

Lt. Col. Dale F. McGee is the new Gyroscope Project Officer of the 10th Infantry Division, Wuerzburg, Germany.

He and his staff are making final plans for the advance planning group and the advance party which will go to Ft. Benning, Ga., prior to the general movement of the division to its new home.

GENERAL EARLE E. PARTRIDGE (right), North American Air Defense Command chief, greets his new deputy Air Marshal C. Roy Slemon of the Royal Canadian Air Force and his wife upon their arrival at Colorado Springs. Air Marshal Slemon has assumed his new duties as deputy commander-in-chief of the newly integrated North American Air Defense system.

NORAD Navy CofS

New Chief of Staff to RAdm. Walter F. Rodee, Commander Naval Forces, NORAD is Capt. G. L. Kohr.

Before coming to the North American Air Defense Command, Captain Kohr commanded the Naval Air Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. He served briefly as commander of Naval Forces, NORAD, before the arrival of Admiral Rodee.

Captain Kohr is married to the former Beatrice Reichard, York, Penn. They reside at 1414 W. Cheyenne Blvd., Colorado Springs.

Rangers Join English Commandos At Devon

Two officers from the Ranger Department of the Army Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga., will attend the British commando course conducted by the Royal Marines at Brickleigh, Devon, England.

They are 1st Lts. Karl F. Lange and Richard Rodney, instructors in the Ranger mountain camp at Dahlonga, Ga., who depart for England on 4 Nov. Benning officials say this is the first official training where Ranger officers have joined their commando counterparts since WW II.

A Marine officer, Maj. Stewart B. McCarthy, jr., is the only other U. S. officer currently assigned to English commando training.

Army Shooters Win Impressive Victory

The U. S. Army took almost half of the first places in the 47 individual rifle and pistol matches, not including the small bore rifle, at the recent 1957 National Matches, Camp Perry, Ohio.

In the National Trophy Matches, Army shooters won four of the five trophies at stake.

M/Sgt Huelet Brenner won the National Trophy Individual Pistol Match and set a new match record of 293 out of a possible 300. An Army team won the pistol team match with an aggregate of 1136, one point under the match record. Other Army teams took third, fourth and fifth places.

The Army Rifle Team took the grand prize of the National Matches when it won the National Trophy Rifle Team Match, shooting an aggregate of 1440 out of a possible 1500 to break the old Marine-held record of 12 points.

In all, there were 47 individual and team rifle and pistol matches, not including the small bore rifle. The Army took 21 first places, the Marines 14, the Navy two and civilians 10.

The Army took 11 of the high power rifle matches, the Marines nine and civilians three.

There were 22 new match records set: 11 by the Army, eight by the Marines and three by civilian shooters.

CONAD TO NORAD

The Continental Air Defense Command (CONAD) established in September 1954 at Colorado Springs, Colo., has been redesignated the North American Air Defense Command.

Change of the name was caused by the recent integration of all U. S. and Canadian air defense forces into a single, operational command with headquarters in the Rockies.

NORAD is commanded by General Earle E. Partridge, USAF, Former RCAF chief, Air Marshal C. Roy Slemon is deputy commander-in-chief.

In addition to the RCAF's Air Defence Command, elements of NORAD include the Air Force's Air Defense Command, the Army's Air Defense Command, and Naval Forces, NORAD.

Former Test Leader Named For Three Stars

President Eisenhower has named RAdm. Byron H. Hanlon for a recess appointment to the rank of Vice Admiral.

Admiral Hanlon, former Commander of Joint Task Force Seven, has been assigned to the Bureau of Naval Personnel for temporary duty since May. He will succeed VAdm. Lorenzo S. Sabin, jr., as Commander, Amphibious Force, Atlantic Fleet.

No new assignment has been announced for Admiral Sabin who has held his present post since May 1956.

Admiral Hanlon's appointment will be subject to Senate confirmation when the Congress reconvenes next year.

VAdm. Hanlon

MAJ. GEN. EDWARD W. SNEDEKER, Assistant Chief of Staff for Marine Corps Plans and Operations, examines the rifle that helped win the National Trophy Individual Rifle Match for T/Sgt. Paul V. Bailey, (right) during the National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. Sergeant Bailey shot a record breaking 247-27V to win the most important individual rifle contest at the Matches.

NEXT WEEK—

NATO NAVAL MANEUVERS will continue to receive on-the-scene coverage in next week's issue from a JOURNAL representative who has covered the story aboard the USS Saratoga.

NUCLEAR MEDICAL TRAINING for Army forces in Europe is the subject of a special report scheduled for publication in the 28 September issue.

WIVES OF SENIOR OFFICERS of the Armed Forces administer the activities of the 85-year-old Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club in Washington, D. C. A feature article on the Club will appear in next week's issue.

Unification Problems Recall Its Start

tificates to Defense Department civilian employees who have served in the Department since its start as the National Military Establishment.

The Pentagon ceremonies on 17 September were featured by the presence of two former Secretaries, Louis Johnson and Robert A. Lovett. Also present was the Secretary-designate, Mr. McElroy, who left immediately after a luncheon get-together for an indoctrination tour of key military and industrial facilities.

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, USA, Admiral Arthur Radford, USN-Ret., and General Nathan F. Twining, USAF, the three officers to hold the post of Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff also participated. All three were in uniform.

The awards ceremony in the Pentagon auditorium—mindful of a graduation—saw Mr. Wilson give a special "cum laude" salute to 10-year Assistant Secretary W. J. McNeil. He has been responsible for all Defense spending since Unification began. That totals over $287 billion.

As Secretary Wilson prepares to leave, it is pertinent to note that many of his last-minute problems are strikingly similar to those which confronted the first Secretary, the late James Forrestal.

Like Mr. Wilson, Secretary Forrestal was required to cut manpower because of budget problems. The first Secretary was told to keep spending below $12 billion; Mr. Wilson's problem—perhaps even more difficult—is to hold spending below $39 billion without endangering security.

Mr. Forrestal did not have a missile problem like the Jupiter-Thor wrangle, but he did have the explosive B-36-carrier dispute.

On the matter of military pay, it is interesting to recall that Secretary Forrestal, at the start of Unification, was successful in leading an effort to revise military pay scales. It was stated then that with increased pay it would be possible to cut back manpower, and this was done until Korea.

When he walks out of his Pentagon office for the last time, Secretary Wilson must turn over to Mr. McElroy as unfinished business the question of what to do about the Cordier Report.

President Ralph J. Cordier of the General Electric Company has challenged that if the Nation wants to cut military manpower, save billions and at the same time safeguard combat effectiveness, the answer is to scrap an outmoded military pay structure.

Mr. Wilson seemingly once agreed. Then, the Budget Bureau tied his hands on the matter.

Now, it will remain to be seen what Mr. McElroy does with this and the other problems impossible for Secretary Wilson to handle before departing from what he so frequently calls "the only five-sided doghouse in the world."

Col. Miller Heads AF Veterinarians

Col. Robert R. Miller, former Air Defense Command Veterinarian, Colorado Springs, Colo., has assumed duties as Assistant for Veterinary Services to the Air Force Surgeon General.

He succeeds Brig. Gen. Wayne O. Kester, who has retired.

Colonel Miller resides at 5103 Fairglen Lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

New Marine I.G.

Maj. Gen. Homer L. Litzenberg, Senior Representative of the U. S. on the U.N. Armistice Commission in Korea, has been named Inspector General of the Marine Corps. He succeeds Maj. Gen. David M. Shoup, who has taken command of the 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

General Litzenberg's successor will be Brig. Gen. Olaf Kyster, USA.

Gen. Bowen Leaves Bragg For Pentagon Assignment

Maj. Gen. John W. Bowen, Commanding General of the 82d Airborne Division, will succeed Maj. Gen. Philip DeWitt Ginder as Assistant Chief of Staff for Reserve Components on 2 Jan.

General Ginder, in his present assignment since 1 Nov. 1956, will succeed Maj. Gen. George B. Barth, Deputy Commanding General, First Army, Governors Island, New York, who will retire 31 Dec., after more than 39 years service.

Maj. Gen. Philip F. Lindeman, formerly Chief of Reserve and ROTC Affairs, has taken command of the 8th Infantry Division in Germany. He replaces Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Watlington, who has been assigned to the U. S. European Command in Paris.

"Strike Back" Will Test Developments Of Past Four Years; Economy Cuts Told

SACLANT Hq.
NORFOLK, VA.

OPERATION Strike Back, due to start 19 September in the North Sea and Norwegian Sea, will be the first "live" exercises in which navies of the NATO nations will have an opportunity to work together on a large scale taking advantage of all the developments since 1953 in weapons, communications, and electronics.

In a press briefing here 14 September to news correspondents about to take off to board ships of the Fleet in the Firth of Clyde, Admiral Jerauld Wright, USN, Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic, pointed out that no joint "live" exercises have been held since 1953.

In Strike Back there will be the assumption that ships of the "Blue" (Allied) Fleet and also those of the "Orange" (opposing) Fleet have all modern capabilities, nuclear, missile, etc.

Admiral Wright stressed that the Exercise is not a "war game," that it does not test any war plans, nor will there be winner and a loser.

Rather, he said, it is an exercise in which the ships of six nations will see how well they can work together in tactics, will determine how their communications (with its language difficulties) work under actual operating conditions, and how they can work out cross-servicing of ships at sea.

Furthermore, Admiral Wright said, it will be at least two months before the official observers will be able to correlate the reports of all participants and evaluate the results. It is expected that their report will be ready in December, after which teams of officers will visit the headquarters of the various participating nations and give briefings on the results and study how their methods of joint operations may be improved.

ADMIRAL WRIGHT pointed out particularly that the entire operation has been in the planning stage for at least the past three years, so that the recently announced Russian maneuvers, to be held in the area northeast of Strike Back, has had no bearing on our plans.

He could see very little danger of the two operations conflicting or of contacts arising.

THE ONLY CHANGES that have been made in the plans for the NATO exercises have been the result of the current economy wave. The United States Navy has been forced to curtail somewhat, Admiral Wright said. Units that were scheduled to participate have been withdrawn because they are to be decommissioned.

The SACLANT commander said that he would like to see more anti-submarine aviation participating. Expenditure of aviation fuel also have been cut back for reasons of economy.

Nevertheless, Admiral Wright said, he expects the exercises to result in much valuable material, so that the equations they will be able to feed into computers in the future will be more accurate and result in more accurate answers.

U. S. Army

Col. Downing Speaks To Flying Graduates

Col. Wayne E. Downing, Assistant Commandant of the Army Helicopter School at Camp Wolters, Tex., and the first graduate of flying training at Camp Gary, Tex., gave the commencement address to the 70 officers recently graduated from Gary's flying school.

Highest average in the class was achieved by 2d Lt. Ralph Jackson, followed closely by Maj. Vincent L. Ulery and 2d Lts. Donald Yenglin, George Reeves and Loyd Ganey, sr.

New Preference Card Makes Choice Easier

The Army has decided to issue a new DA Form 483 covering assignment preference of officers.

The new form will permit an officer to submit a change of preference at any time.

At present, officers are required to submit statements to their career branches at periodic intervals concerning future assignment preferences.

The Army now wants to make it possible for an officer to change his preference at any time.

Pentagon officials said the new form would be ready about the first of the year.

ARMY O. K.'s NEW DELAY FOR ROTC

Army ROTC graduates, on or after 1 May 1958, who desire to take graduate work may apply for a delay not to exceed three years in reporting to active duty.

The Army said the policy was originally restricted principally to students taking graduate studies in technical research and scientific activities. Now it permits consideration for any Army ROTC graduate entering graduate study in recognized fields at degree-granting institutions.

The ROTC graduate will be required to furnish evidence that he has a reasonable chance of acceptance for graduate study. Once granted a delay, he will have to re-apply every six months to maintain his graduate status.

The Army said it may not be able to use all of these "delayed" officers in their chosen field of graduate study. Officers qualified as critical specialists for which the Army has a requirement will not be considered for a six-month tour of active duty but will be called for two years.

Army Has Jobs For RIF'd Men

The Army has announced 800 civilian job vacancies in 173 categories of work which officers and enlisted men being released from active duty may be able to fill.

The jobs, all in the "hard-to-fill" category ranging from Aeronautical Engineer to Xerox Operator, are listed in DA Circular 601-9.

Successful applicants can choose where they want to work in many types of jobs. Electrical Engineers are needed at 30 different Army posts. Fifteen different installations have openings for clerk-typists. Accountants have a choice of 22 posts.

The new circular says that local Civilian Personnel Officers will assist military personnel being released from active duty in finding civilian employment.

Types of jobs open to qualified ex-service personnel and other civilians, as listed in the circular, include: architects, attorney advisors, adjudicators, appraisers, astronomers, stenographers, secretaries, typists, technologists, pharmacologists, physicists, biologists, geologists, chemists, economists, machinists, mathematicians, statisticians, electricians, librarians, veterinarians, and many others.

Maj. Simmons Named OIC

Maj. James W. Simmons, USA, has been named Officer-in-Charge of the Caven Point Army Terminal, a sub installation of the Brooklyn Army Terminal, Col. Robert C. Hanes, Commanding Officer of the Terminal, has announced.

Prior to accepting his present assignment, the Major was the Motor Transportation Officer at the Mainz Sub-Area in Germany. Married to the former Deborah G. Hancock, he resides with Mrs. Simmons at 430 Battery Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. with their two children.

Achieving the Army's goal of reduced maintenance

GREATER AVAILABILITY is assured by the design concept of long-life components.

RELIABILITY is assured by exhaustive pre-production testing. 1000 hour ground endurance test successfully completed.

PERFORMANCE — The H-23D demonstrates higher hovering ceiling, higher rate of climb, more pay load, greater range.

LOWER OPERATING COSTS are inherent in the completely new drive system, due to fewer overhaul periods, accessibility, ease of maintenance and overall mechanical reliability.

10,000th Catapult Shot Carries VAdm. Beakley

VAdm. Wallace M. Beakley, USN, Commander of the Seventh Fleet, recently made the 10,000th steam catapult shot from the deck of the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Lexington, during operations in the East China Sea.

VAdm. Beakley

Admiral Beakley made the trip over to the Lexington by helicopter from his flagship, the heavy cruiser U.S.S. Helena. The plane commander of the aircraft in which Admiral Beakley made his milestone catapult launch was Cdr. L. P. Mathias of the Fleet Tactical Support Squadron 21.

While the traditional presentation of a cake is usually reserved for "thousandth landings" aboard a carrier, Capt. John W. Gannon, commanding officer of the Lex, decided that the 10,000th catapult shot was worthy of this special honor.

While aboard the Lex, the Commander Seventh Fleet visited and held conferences on future task force operations in the Far East with RAdm. Herbert D. Riley, USN, Commander of the Attack Carrier Task Force, better known as Task Force 77.

Navy Stops Operation Of Texas Wind Tunnel

Operation of the supersonic wind tunnel at the Navy's Ordnance Aerophysics Laboratory, Daingerfield, Tex., will end about 1 December.

The Laboratory's ramjet burner facilities, however, will continue in operation.

RAdm. Frederick S. Withington, Chief, Bureau of Ordnance, said inactivation of the tunnel is the result of decreasing demands for its use, technical obsolescence and a lack of funds for modernization.

The Lab has been operated for the Navy by the Convair Division of General Dynamics Corp. since 1945.

Navy Aviator Flies Into Atom Blast To Test Ability of A4D Carrier Planes

"You never quite realize you are flying near a nuclear detonation until it 'pops off'. Then it is all over before you can do anything about it."

Almost casually, Cdr. Stanley Montunus, USN, commented on a flight deliberately calculated to take him near the site of an exploding atomic bomb. He had observed nuclear explosions as early as 1955, but this was his first close association with the device.

Backing him up with painstaking preparations for the flight were 13 other officers and 44 men from the Naval Air Weapons Facility Detachment sent to Indian Springs AFB, Nev., in April of this year. Weapons effects project officer for the operation was Lt. James H. Wynn, III, LCdr. H. E. Fellers was maintenance officer.

The NASWF Detachment is permanently stationed at the Naval Air Special Weapons Facility, Kirtland AFB, N. M.

Reports of the tests in which two Douglas A4D Skyhawks flew in close proximity to the atom blast are said to show that Navy pilots can fly these planes on wartime atomic missions with little danger to themselves or their aircraft.

The tests, named Operation Plumbbob, witnessed numerous successful flights to determine blast and thermal responses of carrier based aircraft to nuclear explosions. They checked structural responses and other effects of atomic weapons.

Douglas Aircraft specialists assisted in gathering data from the tests.

Admiral Glover Ends 38-Year Career As 266 Regular Navy Officers Retire

Adm. Cato D. Glover, jr., U. S. Naval Deputy Commander-in-Chief, Allied Forces, Mediterranean, ending a career of more than 38 years, heads the 266-man list of Regular officers who retired this month.

The list includes one vice admiral, three rear admirals, 32 captains, 27 commanders, 50 lieutenant commanders, 12 lieutenants, two lieutenants (jg), one ensign, and 137 Chief Warrant officers. A breakdown of CWO's by pay grade shows 31 W-4's, 81 W-3's and 25 W-2's.

The officers listed below were retired for the indicated reasons: Permanent Disability—Cdr. James B. Heggie.

The CURTISS-WRIGHT Automatic THROTTLE CONTROL

gives helicopter pilots a "Third Hand"

Many times a helicopter pilot wishes he had three hands . . . one to govern direction, another to control the up, down or hover movement, and a third to regulate the throttle. Now, Curtiss-Wright, in cooperation with the U. S. Army and the U. S. Navy, answers this need for a "third hand" with the all-mechanical Automatic Throttle Control.

It makes the pilot's job much easier. He simply sets the desired engine speed with the regular twist-grip throttle . . . the Automatic Throttle Control takes over and keeps engine speed constant, automatically adjusting fuel flow to meet changing conditions.

The Automatic Throttle Control adds immeasurably to the safety and utility of helicopters . . . safeguards engine against overspeed. Planned for use in airships and other throttle-governing applications, it is one more example of the many cooperative contributions by Curtiss-Wright to America's leadership in air transportation.

U. S. Air Force

Col. Sheppard Heads 1st Missile Division

The Air Force has activated its first Ballistic missile division headquarters at Cooke AFB, Lompoc, Calif., to plan and prepare for future operational ballistic missile units.

Lt. Gen. Samuel E. Anderson, Commander, Air Research and Development Command, Baltimore, Md., said the new unit, known as the 1st Missile Division, will be commanded by Col. William A. Sheppard, under the supervision of Maj. Gen. B. A. Schriever, Commander, Air Force Ballistic Missile Division (ARDC). It will have overall supervision of the Air Force ballistic missile training program and of establishing the initial operational capability for these strategic missiles.

The Air Force has previously announced the activation of the 704th Strategic Missile Wing at Cooke, The Wing, along with the other future units will be directed by the 1st Missile Division.

The primary mission of Cooke will be training of the Air Force ballistic missile units; it will have a operation capability as a secondary mission.

SPACE MEDICINE CHIEF

Lt. Col. George Steinkamp, MC, USAF, is the new chief of the Department of Space Medicine at the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex.

He succeeds Dr. Hubertus Strughold, world-renowned space scientist, who founded the Department in 1949. Dr. Strughold, now on a visit abroad, will be Advisor for Research to Maj. Gen. Otis O. Benson, Jr., Commandant of the School at Randolph.

PORTSMOUTH NOW PEASE

More than 30,000 persons attended ceremonies 7 Sept. officially redesignating Portsmouth AFB, N. H., as Pease AFB.

Top military and civilian dignitaries attending the ceremonies and the air show which followed included Under Secretary of the Air Force Malcolm A. McIntyre; Gen. Thomas S. Power, SAC, Commander-in-Chief, and Republican Senators Styles Bridges and Norris Cotton of New Hampshire. Also present were Lt. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Deputy CofS for Personnel; Maj. Gen. Walter C. Sweeney, Jr., Eighth Air Force Commander, and Maj. Gen. Joe W. Kelly, USAF Director of Legislative Liaison.

Special guests of honor were the late Captain Pease's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harl Pease, sr., and their daughter, Charlotte of Plymouth, N. H. Capt. Harl Pease was posthumously awarded the C. Medal of Honor after he failed to return from a B-17 bombing mission in the Pacific during WW II.

Brig. Gen. Walter E. Arnold is Commander of the 817th Air Division stationed at Pease.

Plattsburgh First Open House

New York State's only intercontinental bomber base and one of the newest SAC bases in the northern U. S. will be opened to the public for the first time 12 Oct., when Plattsburgh AFB holds its scheduled open house.

Plans announced by Col. George W. Von Arb, Base Commander, include an air show featuring the Thunderbirds, formation flights of B-47 Bombers of the 30th Bombardment Wing, JATO operations, low altitude refueling of a B-47 Bomber and static displays of bombers, fighters and missiles.

The base is located on Lake Champlain near U. S. route 9, 65 miles south of Montreal, Canada.

GENERAL WANG SHU-MING, Chief of the General Staff, Republic of China Forces, awards the Cloud and Banner decoration to three Hawaii-based Air Force major generals at Pacific Air Forces headquarters. The awards were presented on behalf of the Republic of China for the assistance rendered to the Chinese Air Force. The award recipients with General Wang are: (left to right) Maj. Gen. Hunter Harris, Jr., Maj. Gen. William T. Hudnell and Maj. Gen. Oliver K. Niess.

Shift AF Colonels

COL. PAUL I. DOTY, former Director of Procurement and Production at Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, Ga., has been assigned as WRAMA Acting Deputy Commander during the temporary absence of COL. NORMAN C. SPENCER, now attending the Advanced Management Program at Harvard University.

COL. THOMAS O. LAWTON, JR., was named WRAMA Director of Procurement and Production, succeeding Colonel Doty.

COL. JOHN E. PLUENNEKE is the new hospital commander at Lackland, AFB, Tex.

COL. CHARLES F. McKENNA, III, SAC Liaison Officer with the Alaskan Command, will become commander of the 96th Bombardment Wing, a SAC B-47 Stratojet unit now being transferred from Altus AFB, Okla., to Dyess AFB, Texas. He replaces COL. AUDRIN R. WALKER, who will be SAC Liaison Officer with Pacific Air Forces.

AF Academy Chooses Major Wing Commander

First Air Force Academy cadet to hold the ranks of Cadet Major and Cadet Wing Commander is Cadet Second Class Robert D. Beckel of Wala Wala, Wash., a member of the class of 1959. Rank of the Cadet Wing Commander will be raised to Cadet Colonel in 1958 when the Academy, temporarily located at Lowry AFB, Colo., will have four classes in operation.

Other members of the Wing staff are Cadet Captains Robert H. Siteman, Gerald J. Garvey and Dean C. Wood.

Brig. Gen. S. T. Wray Gets Two-Star Post

Brig. Gen. Stanley T. Wray has been appointed to replace Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Bryan, Jr., as Commander of ARDC's Wright Air Development Center (WADC), Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

General Bryan recently underwent major surgery at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Silver Spring, Md., and is expected to have a long convalescent period prior to being returned to full military duty.

Lt. Gen. S. E. Anderson, Commander of the USAF's Air Research and Development Command, announced that the replacement action was taken "because the length of General Bryan's convalescence and the importance of WADC's mission to the Air Force research and development program required the immediate appointment of a successor."

General Wray assumed his new command on 18 Sept. He had been Chief of the Electronics Defense Systems Division of the Air Materiel Command's Directorate of Procurement and Production since December 1955.

The Division, located in New York City, supervises and assists Air Force contractors in executing their contracts for the development of the electronic air defense systems for the North American continent.

B/G Barton Commands NAMAP at Tachikawa

Brig. Gen. Paul L. Barton, USAF, has arrived at Tachikawa Air Base, Japan, from Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, to assume duties as Commander, Northern Air Materiel Area, Pacific. He replaces Col. Paul S. Blair, who left 26 Aug. for the 21. Col. John A. Way has been NAMAP commander since that date.

Brig. Gen. Barton

Announcement of General Barton's new duties was made earlier by Maj. Gen. William T. Hudnell, Commander, Air Materiel Forces in the Pacific, who said the assignment reflects "the increasingly important role of NAMAP in Far East Air Force logistics since Headquarters AMFPA moved from Japan to Hawaii" in June.

In addition to providing support to the combat forces of the Pacific Air Forces, General Hudnell said, NAMAP is responsible for the materiel support of the Air Forces of Japan and South Korea through the U. S. Mutual Assistance Programs.

General Barton is a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, class of 1934, the Air War College, National War College, and the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University.

Unification's First Decade. On the 10th anniversary of Unification, Mr. Neil H. McElroy began 17 September a series of orientation visits to key military and industrial installations in the United States. He takes charge at the Pentagon next month as the sixth Secretary of Defense.

The coincidence of the official start of Mr. McElroy's indoctrination and the anniversary celebration point up the fact that Unification has been a process of change—not only in personalities, but even more important, in concept. We believe that it has been a steady march forward, proved where it counts most—in times of crisis and battle.

From the days before formulation into law in the National Security Act of 1947 to the present, Unification has been marked by controversy. Sharp disagreements among the Services, and among Members of Congress, which frequently involved wide segments of the public have received great notoriety.

Much has been made, for example, of the Navy's forceful allegations against the Air Force B-36 program; the Air Force's attacks against the effectiveness of carriers in strategic air warfare; the Army's fears that the Marine Corps was creating a "second land army;" and the concern of the Marine Corps that the Army wanted full control of all ground action, including amphibious warfare development.

As Unification begins its second decade and there is an opportunity for a broader perspective on these and other inter-Service controversies, we maintain that, on balance, the public expression of varying viewpoints by responsible officials has had a beneficial effect on our over-all defense effort. Some backstage maneuvering, such as transmittal of inflammatory documents by "eager beaver" officers to selected correspondents, has hurt the over-all defense effort, but there is no question that discussions of urgent Service problems by responsible officials in Congressional testimony, speeches, and news conferences have helped gain the support necessary for a continuing military posture, braced by a $38 billion budget and more than 2,500,000 men and women in uniform.

The day must never come in our democracy when military men and civilian leaders of the Services are forbidden to make known their judgments on such a vital matter as defense in the Atomic Age.

It would be much easier, of course, if the Service Chiefs always were in agreement, or if they could be forced to reach agreement on all matters. But that is not the way of our Government. Ours is a Government of free people, where varying viewpoints must be respected, and where properly designated officials can count on a hearing.

This right of discussion and debate has been a hallmark of Unification.

Even before the end of WWII, which had seen a temporary Joint Chiefs of Staff organization created under Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Staff to the Commander-in-Chief, to direct global strategy, plans were studied for changes in the organization of the Armed Forces.

In December, 1945, President Harry S. Truman sent a Unification plan to Congress.

During Congressional hearings which lasted through two sessions, Army people, including General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, came out for a merger of the Services, and a single Chief of Staff. The Navy, warning against such a concentration of power, advocated a more limited Unification approach.

After the democratic processes of full discussion had been exhausted, a compromise was worked out. The National Military Establishment was established. James Forrestal, who had been Secretary of the Navy, took oath 17 September 1947 as the first Secretary of Defense, heading Departments of the Army, Navy and the newly created Air Force.

SATURDAY, 21 SEPTEMBER 1957

Among his early actions was the activation of the Military Air Transport Service. MATS proved that Unification could work effectively in time of crisis in the brilliantly executed Berlin Airlift.

Secretary Forrestal, though in office only a year, appealed in 1948 for substantially increased powers for the Defense Department, which then was essentially a "confederation" of the Services. Again, there was much debate. Decision was made finally to give the Secretary "authority, direction, and control" of the Services, to provide him with a Deputy and three Assistant Secretaries and to create the office of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

By this time, Louis Johnson had taken over. Unification went ahead, but Service strength went down. Spending dipped to less than $12 billion. In June 1950 the Communists struck in Korea, and Unified forces went into action in the Far East as a rapid buildup was launched at home.

General of the Army George C. Marshall took command at the Pentagon in September, 1950, and was succeeded the next year by his Deputy, Robert A. Lovett.

At the height of the fighting in Korea, the Armed Forces were spending $43 billion a year, reached a peak strength of over 3,600,000.

New weapons, new dangers and rising defense costs prompted the decision of the Eisenhower Administration in January 1953 to ask a commission under Nelson A. Rockefeller to undertake a new study of Unification.

This led to Reorganization Plan No. 6, which increased further the power of the Secretary of Defense, gave him nine assistant secretaries, and added also to the authority of the JCS Chairman.

From its start 10 years ago to today, Unification has seen a careful strengthening of power. This has been essential to assure maximum effectiveness of the fighting forces against the threat of Communist aggression. It is quite possible that Mr. Wilson, as he leaves office, and Mr. McElroy will recommend to President Eisenhower further changes.

Unification is a dynamic process. The American people always are willing to change things for the better, but they also insist that they be told why and be informed of the alternatives. We hope therefore that the second decade of Unification will avoid any threat of Service regimentation. Unification is one thing; forced uniformity is another.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (20 Sept. 1947)—With the swearing in of James Forrestal as Secretary of Defense and the official creation of the National Military Establishment, the United States launched this week broad revision and reorganization of its defensive machinery. Besides recognition of air power's new position of parity by giving the Army Air Force a separate department in our organized fighting forces under a single Cabinet member, the Act seeks to integrate the policies and procedures of all departments, agencies, and functions of the government relating to National Security.

50 Years Ago (21 Sept. 1907) — A balloon for the Navy is the next advanced idea in military signal work. The Russians had such a balloon which they used at Vladivostok to make ascensions to locate submarine mines. The officers would go up about 800 feet and a tug would steam about for several hours holding the balloon by a cable. A telephone connected the men in the car to the tug.

90 Years Ago (21 Sept. 1867)—The Abyssinian war—if there is to be one—is in every way a most awkward and embarrassing one for England, and entitles her to the sincere commiseration of all civilized nations. It is one impossible, perhaps, to avoid, and yet one which is very embarrassing to undertake. The land is hardly worth annexing to the British Empire; the spoils of King Theodore and his barbaric palaces will probably not pay the seizing.

READERS' VIEWS

(Letters to the Editor must have author's name and address, but name will be omitted on publication if writer so states. Longer letters may be extracted for publication.)

Quiet On The Pay Front

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

A group of us here at Ft. Meade noted how spokesmen for government civilian employees lost no time in promising a strong fight for a pay raise next year, immediately after President Eisenhower's veto of a pay increase.

What we are wondering and worrying about is whether anyone is going to speak out concerning another military pay increase between now and the time Congress resumes next year. At least, Chairman Cordiner got one chance to testify on Capitol Hill, but it looks now as if the pay issue is going to be buried for the Fall.

A WORRIED MAJOR

Senator Smith Saluted

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your editorial Harsh Charges in the 31 August issue reflects a shocking misconception of the real issues involved. It is true that General

O'Donnell was handled a bit roughly for not doing his homework, but a careful study of Senator Smith's detailed statement in the Congressional Record will reveal that she really had the facts and the General did not.

The heart of the matter is the promotion to general officer grade of a Reserve officer with but 24 days' active duty since World War II. The fact that the officer in question, Mr. James Stewart, is a famous movie actor is not relevant. That the Armed Forces should see fit to nominate for promotion a Reserve officer so patently untrained and unprepared for the duties he would perform during mobilization can only be considered a major error in personnel administration. We should all be grateful to Senator Smith for having the alertness and the courage to correct the error.

We career officers take pride in our profession and the well recognized demands it makes upon flag and general officers. What a blow to this pride and self respect it is then to see an officer with so little active duty nominated for promotion to Brigadier General. How can we presume to ask the Congress for a living wage for senior officers if we ourselves appear to hold their qualifications so cheaply?

It was presumptuous of the JOURNAL to say that the "Services were shocked at the strong language used by Senator Margaret Chase Smith . . .". Most career officers were immensely cheered by this incident.

If the JOURNAL is to continue to reflect the views of the Services as it has done so ably for many years, it should not make the erroneous assumption that prompted the editorial Harsh Charges. I respectfully recommend more consultation with career officers on active duty before editorials are written that appear to reflect Service views.

CAPTAIN, U. S. NAVY

Defense Secretaries

There have been five Secretaries of Defense during the first decade of Unification, and seven Deputy Secretaries:

JAMES V. FORRESTAL, Secretary of the Navy from May 1944, until he took the oath of office as the first Secretary of Defense on 17 Sept. 1947, served as head of the new National Military Establishment until 27 March 1949. He was admitted to the Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., on 2 April 1949, in a state of exhaustion, his condition "directly the result of excessive work during the war and post-war years." He took his own life in a leap from a sixteenth floor window of the Naval Hospital 22 May 1949, and was buried in Arlington National Cemetery on 25 May 1949.

LOUIS JOHNSON, a former Assistant Secretary of the Army, was sworn in as Secretary of Defense 28 March 1949, and served until 19 Sept. 1950. Following his resignation, he returned to his legal practice at Clarksburg, West Virginia.

GEORGE CATLETT MARSHALL, General of the Army, WW II Chief of Staff of the Army, former Secretary of State and president of the National Red Cross was sworn in as Secretary of Defense 21 Sept. 1950, and served until his retirement on 12 Sept. 1951.

ROBERT A. LOVETT, Under Secretary of State under General Marshall, and Deputy Secretary of Defense under General Marshall, succeeded the General as Secretary of Defense 17 Sept. 1951, serving until 20 Jan. 1953. At the end of his term, Mr. Lovett returned to the banking business with Brown Brothers, Harriman and Company of New York City.

CHARLES E. WILSON, president of General Motors, was sworn in as Secretary of Defense 28 Jan. 1953. He has submitted his resignation to be effective in early October. Mr. Neil H. McElroy, president of Procter and Gamble, will be Mr. Wilson's successor.

DEPUTY SECRETARIES

Stephen T. Early*, 10 Aug. 1949 to 30 Sept. 1950.

Robert A. Lovett, 4 Oct. 1950 to 16 Sept. 1951.

William C. Foster, 24 Sept. 1951 to 20 Jan. 1953.

Roger M. Keyes, 2 Feb. 1953 to 1 May 1954.

Robert B. Anderson, 3 May 1954 to 4 Aug. 1955.

Reuben B. Robertson, 5 Aug. 1955 to 25 April 1957.

Donald A. Quarles, 1 May 1957 to Present.

*Served as Under Secretary of Defense from 2 May 1949 until 9 Aug. 1949, when that position was abolished and that of Deputy Secretary of Defense was established.

Defense Secretary Wilson

"AMERICAN APPROACH"

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson this week described Unification as "an American approach to a big problem."

He told 10-year Defense Department civilian employees that significant progress had been made in providing the Nation with more effective combat forces.

The Secretary conceded there had been difficulties and disputes.

He himself has taken the firm position that Unification should not demand "yes men" at the Pentagon. Mr. Wilson has said he respects a man who presents his arguments as forcefully as he knows how, and who then carries out the decision of his superior, whatever that may be.

Secretaries of the Army

KENNETH C. ROYALL, the first Secretary of the Army, took the oath of office 18 Sept. 1947, and served until 27 April 1949. He served as Under Secretary of War from 9 Nov. 1945 until 24 July 1947 when he became Secretary of War. The title of that position was changed to Secretary of the Army when the National Security Act of 1947 became effective.

GORDON GRAY served as Secretary of the Army from 20 June 1949 until 12 April 1950. Previously, he had served as Assistant Secretary and Under Secretary of War. Since 13 April 1950, Mr. Gray has served as Special Assistant to the President; President of the University of North Carolina; Assistant Secretary of Defense (International Security Affairs), and is now Director of Defense Mobilization.

FRANK PACE, jr., assumed the office of Secretary of the Army on 12 April 1950 and served until 20 Jan. 1953. He had been Director of the Budget from January 1949 until his appointment as Secretary of the Army.

ROBERT T. STEVENS vacated the Chairmanship of the Board of the textile firm of J. P. Stevens & Company to become Secretary of the Army on 4 Feb. 1953. He resigned 21 July 1955 to return to the Stevens Company.

WILBER M. BRUCKER, former Governor of Michigan, became Secretary of the Army on 21 July 1955, having served previously as General Counsel of the Department of Defense.

Secretaries of the Navy

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, the then Under Secretary of the Navy, became Secretary of the Navy when Secretary Forrestal became Secretary of Defense. He assumed the office on 18 Sept. 1947, and served until 24 May 1949. He is now senior partner in the law firms of Sullivan and Wynot of Manchester, New Hampshire, and Sullivan, Bernard and Shea of Washington, D. C.

FRANCIS P. MATTHEWS served from 25 May 1949, until 31 July 1951, when appointed Ambassador to Ireland. He is now deceased.

DAN A. KIMBALL, Secretary of the Navy from 31 July 1951, to 20 Jan. 1953, served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air from 11 Feb. 1949, until his appointment as Secretary. He is now president of Aerojet General Corporation and a director of General Tire and Rubber Company.

ROBERT B. ANDERSON, Secretary of the Navy from 4 Feb. 1953, until 3 May 1954, later served as Deputy Secretary of Defense and is now Secretary of the Treasury.

CHARLES S. THOMAS served as Under Secretary of the Navy from 9 Feb. 1953, until 28 July 1953, when he became Assistant Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics). On 3 May 1954, Mr. Thomas took office as Secretary of the Navy, serving until 1 April 1957. He is now a director of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

THOMAS S. GATES, jr., a partner in the Philadelphia investment firm of Drexel and Company, was Under Secretary of the Navy from 7 Oct. 1953, until he took office as Secretary of the Navy on 1 April 1957.

Secretaries of the Air Force

W. STUART SYMINGTON, former Assistant Secretary of War for Air was sworn into office as the first Secretary of the Air Force on 18 Sept. 1947 and served in that capacity until 23 April 1950. He is now the Senior U. S. Senator from Missouri.

THOMAS K. FINLETTER, Secretary of the Air Force from 24 April 1950 until 19 Jan. 1953 had previously served as chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration mission to the U. K.

HAROLD TALBOTT, an executive in the Chrysler Corporation and other firms succeeded Mr. Finletter as Secretary of the Air Force on 5 Feb. 1953 and served until 14 Aug. 1955, when he returned to private business. He is deceased.

DONALD A. QUARLES, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Research and Development) took the oath of office as Secretary of the Air Force on 15 Aug. 1955 and served until 1 May 1957, when he became Deputy Secretary of Defense.

JAMES H. DOUGLAS, Under Secretary of the Air Force since 3 March 1953, succeeded Donald A. Quarles as Secretary of the Air Force 1 May 1957.

NEW SECDEF MCELROY will be confronted by a power-packed controversy in the prospective revamping of the Reserve Forces. The National Guard Association already is protesting the 400,000 limit on the Guard. THE RESERVE OFFICERS ASSOCIATION has lined up former President Truman to be Honorary National Membership Chairman as part of an ROA effort to strengthen itself for a fight for its traditional 'Minute Man' role in national defense.

BLUE COLLARS AND CUFFS on the sailor's dress white jumper should begin to make their appearance in the Summer of 1959. About 80 per cent of the sailors who wear-tested the uniform with the Fleet recommend its adoption. Immediate adoption of the uniform is delayed by a search for a color-fast dye. This obstacle is expected to be surmounted in time for the Navy to make the uniform official before Summer '59.

MILITARY MANEUVERS are certain to be curtailed because of the budget situation. Already, command post Exercise Clover Leaf II at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.—it was to have been a paper test related to a tactical situation in Western Europe—has been abandoned. Other casualties are coming.

ELECTRONIC MAINTENANCE COSTS are rising sharply throughout the Services. The Air Force estimates it costs about twice as much to maintain electronic equipment per year as the first outlay. The Navy calculates that during the life of electronic equipment, the maintenance cost is about 10 times the initial cost. THESE FIGURES WILL BE STRESSED when Congress resumes hearings next year on the Cordier Plan.

AIR FORCE LT. GEN. C. S. IRVINE, Deputy CofS, Materiel, one of the most direct-speaking officials at the Pentagon, put the budget problem succinctly in a speech 17 Sept. at Los Angeles. "If expenditures exceed the estimates, we will cut down on quantity. If cost per item runs too high, we will cancel projects."

THE AIR FORCE IS STRESSING the desire to keep its uniform plain but distinctive. Wearing of overseas bars and Army infantry and medical badges is optional but discouraged.

DEPARTURE FROM JAPAN of Army forces will be made first from the "flanks", Hokkaido and Kyushu, working inward to the Tokyo-Yokohama area. The Army will require Camp Zama and the dependent housing area there for continued logistical and administrative activities in support of U. S. forces in Japan and Korea.

THERE NOW IS LITTLE DOUBT that some major military installations will be ordered to start shutting down by the end of this fiscal year to get within budget ceilings. One difficulty is, however, that savings are not immediate. It takes considerable and immediate expenditures to mothball a facility.

EFFORTS TO OBTAIN more dental care for Service families in the U. S. are jeopardized by the budget pinch. A Defense Department Committee is studying the problem. Remedial legislation will be recommended, but painful troubles are inevitable at the Budget Bureau.

BRIG. GEN. CAREY A. RANDALL, USMC, Military Assistant to Secretaries of Defense Lovett and Wilson, will be continued in this key post with Secretary McElroy. General Randall, who holds a "spot" promotion in effect only while he fills the specific billet, undoubtedly will remain in the Pentagon assignment at least until his name appears in a zone of consideration for one-star rank in the Marine Corps. He was not in this year's zone (story Page 1). DURING ALMOST SEVEN YEARS' SERVICE at the Pentagon, General Randall has been a major factor in the day-to-day functioning of the Office of Secretary of Defense, has had something more than a little to say about who sees the Secretary, when and for how long. He will be relied on heavily by Mr. McElroy during the intensive indoctrination period.

GENERAL LEMAY'S PRESENCE at the Pentagon as Vice CofS is beginning to be felt in the Air Force. Latest action is his call for more and better small arms marksmanship training. There's some speculation that the General also may urge more emphasis on judo training. As C-in-C of SAC, he gave great attention to individual physical proficiency.

THE NAVY'S NEW ASST. SEC'Y for Personnel and Reserve Forces, Richard Jackson, is not likely to say that manpower problems are "Greek to me." He was a teacher of Greek at Phillips Andover Academy. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate from Dartmouth, the 47-year-old Assistant Secretary holds a law degree from Columbia University. He served with the Navy in WWII, reached the rank of lieutenant commander.

WATCH FOR A SHARP INCREASE in retirement applications from senior officers of all the Services as a result of current cutbacks. More headquarters units are certain to be eliminated. Also, whenever the fighting forces are reduced, a number of officers with over 30 years' service become discouraged and ask retirement.

RETIREMENT PROBLEMS are headed for a controversial review on Capitol Hill. Some Members of Congress, among them the influential Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex.) of the Armed Services Committee, contend that it may be necessary to tighten voluntary retirement policies because of rising expenditures for the retired lists. On the other hand, the Services—particularly the Navy—wants the rules relaxed to ease "hump" problems on the promotion lists and to ease the impact of manpower reductions. There's no easy answer.

THE ARMY APPEARS UNDER WRAPS in telling the public about its new missile commands, first called atomic support commands. There had been plans for 6 of these specialized commands during this fiscal year. So far, in addition to the pioneer unit in Italy (SETAF), the Army has organized missile commands at Ft. Bragg, N. C., and Ft. Hood, Tex. However, Army civilian and military chiefs have failed to give these outfits the public mention that had been anticipated.

IT WILL BE A RACE to the wire for SecDef Wilson in his bid to win Budget Bureau O.K. for the $49 million proficiency pay plan he announced in May. Also pending is a $15 million program of reduced rentals for more than 30,000 families forced to occupy substandard quarters. If the Budget Bureau delays much longer on these matters, Secretary Wilson's successor may find himself with some difficult explaining to do before the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees.

The Certificate cited Colonel Cabrinha's establishment of procedures for the movement of gyroscoping units through the Terminal and commended his diplomacy, tact and determination as exhibited by his supervision of the movement of Hungarian refugees through the Port earlier in the year. Colonel Cabrinha leaves for reassignment in California where he will join his wife and four children who reside at 630 Hilmar Avenue, Santa Clara.

CAMP PAGE HONORS MEDAL WINNER

Camp Page, Korea, has been formally dedicated by General George H. Decker, C-in-C, United Nations Command; Commander, U. S. Forces Korea, and Commanding General, Eighth U. S. Army.

Near Inchon, Korea, the new home of 50th AAA Bn., a unit of Korea's chief antiaircraft defense organization, the 10th AAA Group, the Camp was named in honor of Lt. Col. John U. D. Page, who was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor for heroism around the Chosin Reservoir in December, 1950.

General Decker presented Lt. Col. Thomas F. Hayes, Commander of the 50th AAA Bn., with the plaque commemorating Camp Page's opening and its legend. After the dedication address, General Decker, Col. James S. Billups, Jr., Commander of the 10th AAA Group, and Colonel Hayes reviewed the troops.

Among other dignitaries at the opening ceremonies were: Maj. Gen. Willis S. Matthews, Chief of Korean Military Advisory Group; Brig. Gen. Marion W. Schewe, Deputy Chief of Staff, plans and operations, Eighth Army; Brig. Gen. James P. Hannigan, Commanding General, Eighth Army Support Command and G-4 Eighth Army; and Brig. V. W. Barlow, commander, British Contingent, Korea.

Senior Army Aviators:

Crawford, James C, Arty.
Deardorff, Charles H, Armor, NG.
Brandt, 1st Lt Maynard L, Armor, NG.
Paulson, Eugene C, Sig C.

World's oldest mystery soon to be solved

Ever since man has had the imagination to ponder any problem, he has wondered what lay on the dark side of the moon . . .

Now, engineers predict that rockets carrying cameras or TV will circle Luna within five years and show us her other face.

At Douglas Aircraft, where one of the first rocket and missile projects was set up in 1941, practical investigations have helped show the way to lunar circumnavigation. They have led to more effective missile guidance systems . . . helped establish basic principles of air-to-air rocket fire . . . led to use of such heat-resistant materials as titanium, ceramics, and plastics. Douglas engineers have investigated space physiology and psychology—how man will react in the weightfree glare of space—and even investigated new kinds of power, engines that may use ions or light rays to reach the stars.

Wac-Corporal, an early Douglas rocket, takes off in the nose of a captured V-2 to set what was then a world altitude record. Douglas has since developed such weapons as Nike, the new Nike-Hercules, and the Army's potent Honest John, which can carry a nuclear warhead. Even more exciting projects—still classified—are going full speed ahead at Douglas.

Maxwell Course Graduates 10,000

The Weapons Orientation Course of the Air Command and Staff College, Air University, Maxwell AFB, Ala., has graduated its 10,000th student, Maj. William P. Fife, assigned to Hq, USAF (AFCIN).

Col. Loren E. Ireland, Director, Air Warfare Systems Courses, of which the Weapons Orientation Course is a part, presented Major Fife with a diploma, especially inscribed for the occasion, before the graduating students of Class 57-23.

The Weapons Orientation Course acquaints command and staff officers with the general characteristics of Air Force weapons, their delivery systems, and problems associated with their employment. The course, which has been operating since 1952, averages 30 classes per year with approximately 85 students per class.

BGen. Zoller Replaces BGen. Gent In Korea

Brig. Gen. Virgil L. Zoller is the new commander of the Fifth Air Force's 314th Air Division in Korea, replacing Brig. Gen. Thomas J. Gent who was reassigned to USAF Headquarters.

General Zoller, who received his star on 24 July of this year, was formerly intelligence staff officer at USAF headquarters.

* A SPECIALIZED INVESTMENT SERVICE FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES *

Your investment problems are of particular interest to Harris, Upham & Co.'s Armed Forces Department. Staffed with investment specialists for men and women in uniform, this unique organization is geared to:

- help you set up a workable, periodic investment program, custom-fitted to your own needs and objectives.
- supply free information on stocks, bonds, mutual funds and monthly investment plans.
- maintain a continuing, regular investment program wherever you may be stationed—in the states or overseas.

For more than 60 years, Harris, Upham's nationwide network of offices and complete brokerage facilities have served investors throughout the country. To help members of the Armed Forces plan their investment programs, a "Military Investment Manual" has been prepared, explaining how Harris, Upham's Armed Forces Department can assist you. To get your free copy, fill in and mail the coupon below.

Navy Chooses 830 For Commander; Doubles Number Picked Last Year

three stripes.

Nine of the 44 Reservists selected were picked from above the zone.

The selections include 378 Naval Aviators, 349 of whom are Regulars and 29 active duty Reservists.

In other categories, the board chose 41 Regular and three Reserve Engineering Duty Officers; and, 23 Regular and one Reserve Aeronautical Engineering Duty Officers.

In the Special Duty Officer category, 19 were selected. Of this number, five Regular and eight Reservists specialize in communications. The remaining SDO selectees are all Regulars. Three specialize in Naval Intelligence, one is a public information specialist and two are hydrographers.

All selectees entered the Navy in 1943 and 1944.

Pentagon Rescinds O'Sea Family Order

The Department of Defense has decided to restore commissary and post exchange privileges for unauthorized dependents overseas.

This rescinds a ban which became effective 6 June following publication on 7 May of Defense Department Directive 1315.7.

That Directive, seeking to curtail presence of unauthorized families abroad, ordered that they be denied commissary and post exchange benefits.

This resulted in a considerable number of protests from servicemen and also from some commanders overseas.

The Defense Department will keep in effect, however, a restriction on "space available" travel overseas for dependents of E-4's with less than four years service and men in lower ranks.

A Pentagon official said the change concerning commissary and PX privileges is being made because "we have found out that individual hardships are greater than the gain in dollars."

No space available travel will be permitted for unauthorized dependents going overseas, and it was stated that return spaces for these persons will be extremely limited.

the honorary vice-president, Mrs. Thomas L. Becknell, jr., wife of the Deputy Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts; Mrs. James S. Dietz, executive chairman; and Mrs. James W. Parker, luncheon chairman, together with fashion coordinator Sue Boteler, who served as commentator for the style show presented by one of Washington's leading stores. The fashion review aroused enthusiastic attention and was highlighted by one of the Club's members, Mrs. John A. Foley, joining the professional models in displaying the collection. Among those attending were 16 newcomers.

Decorations for the affair were keyed to the Fall turnover of Supply Corps personnel, with cleverly constructed houses and moving vans centering each table. Mrs. Herman Spector, decoration chairman, was assisted by Mesdames O. V. Wallgren, Roger Gray and B. Beckner.

JANGO Board Entertained—

The president of the Junior Army and Navy Guild Organization, Mrs. Stanley L. School Bells Ring In Crowded Classes For Many Service Youngsters Overseas

(The following letter was sent to THE JOURNAL by Miss Maud-Ellen Zimmerman, who has been Chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Overseas Teacher Association.)

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

AS a teacher for the past nine years in the Army dependent schools in Japan and Germany, I thank you for publicizing the need to provide more funds for the successful operation of schools for the children of our Service families while overseas.

In my opinion, these schools used to combine most of the advantages of public school and private school rolled into one: small enough classes to assist each child to learn to the limit of his capability (maximum about 20 to 22 students), and salaries for teachers equal to those in leading systems of the United States.

For the past few years, however, school enrollments have risen much faster than the funds provided to maintain staff and supplies. Money no longer comes from war reparations, and the lack of yen, deutsche marks, and other indigenous currency, has been keenly felt.

It is encouraging to know that a member of Congress is investigating the situation. I sincerely hope that Representative Flood will be able to enlist the support of the appropriate committees and finally of both houses of Congress to provide adequately for a good American school system overseas. Not only will the individual children benefit, foreigners will observe and see that the United States considers education important enough to spend the necessary money to properly train all its citizens through at least the twelfth grade.

It is distressing that at present when foreign teachers and students visit our schools, they find in many places classrooms overcrowded and subjects omitted from the curriculum. We explain, of course, that in most parts of the States a high school student can study shorthand, bookkeeping, and typing, or Latin, Spanish, and Ancient or English History.

It is unfortunate that we cannot "put our best foot forward" and must duplicate abroad the deficiencies that we regret must exist in some parts of the United States, instead of exhibiting the value many of our school systems place on such offerings as music, home economics and shopwork courses for all students in grades 7-9.

Of course, it is more important to build basic skills than to provide weekly assembly programs or newspapers published several times a month, valuable as these activities are. However, in many schools overseas today, it is reported that the class load is too great to enable the needed help in reading and arithmetic to be given.

In a typical high school last year, 1956-57, the remedial reading teacher who had "worked wonders" with ninth-graders the year before, had to return to regular English instruction. Class enrollment in high school English and history classes in this school reached high 30's and high 40's. Undoubtedly students could not receive special remedial help to overcome their handicaps in the reading skill so necessary to their success.

Service children generally lose approximately a month from school every time their father is rotated. Besides adjusting to a new home environment, they must adjust to new teachers, classmates, textbooks, and courses of study. Often they find the class has studied already something they have missed, or is about to study a topic they have already mastered.

Only when time is available for close teacher-pupil cooperation, can the individual child's needs be fully met. He requires special conferences and tests upon entering each subject-class so that he may be assigned work at once which he personally needs. When this is possible, he works diligently and delights in his progress.

Many Service children do succeed in overcoming their handicaps, but these are generally rapid learners or the ones fortunate to be able to receive help at home. In advanced algebra and chemistry, many parents are naturally unable to assist with home study. Professionally qualified teachers are the answer, uncrowded classes, and schools supplied with up-to-date laboratories and classrooms, with textbooks always on hand for new arrivals. Fortunately, a number of schools overseas offer these. However, every school should, in fairness to children already handicapped by frequent changes of school and in fairness to the reputation of the United States abroad.

In conclusion I should like to ask for further information about the desire of the Department of Defense to retain personnel experienced in their school system. In the JOURNAL of 7 September 1957: "... Contrary to recommendations of the Overseas Teachers Association, however, the Department of Defense has no plans to establish a career program for overseas teachers. Current belief in the Department is that the high teacher turnover brings a 'fresh point of view' to overseas schools and keeps the schools abreast of current trends in the States. ..."

This reported viewpoint is also contrary to the recommendations made by a committee comprised of representatives of the Air Force, Navy, Army, and Department of Defense. Under the chairmanship of Mr. Daniel J. Carr, this committee visited schools in Germany, England, France, French Morocco and Italy in May and early June, 1956. Following is a quotation from page seven of this committee's report of August 1956, titled "Study of Education of Dependents in Foreign Areas":

"... It is the considered opinion of the Department of Defense Committee that the high rate of turnover in the teaching positions is expensive and detrimental to the best quality of instruction in the schools. ... Additionally, it is the consensus of the Department of Defense Committee that every effort should be made to bring about the necessary changes in employment with a view to establishing a hard core of career employees. ..."

Your cooperation in publishing a clarification on this contradiction will be greatly appreciated. I am confident that my personal interest in this important topic is shared by many teachers and administrators in the dependent schools system. While we recognize that the majority of the staff will always come from persons on leave from Stateside systems, we believe that every effort should be made to establish overseas such a good professional situation that teachers, principals, and others, will extend such leave to the maximum and that a good number will form a core of highly qualified personnel "acclimated to the system, assisting in the continuity and development of its programs." Both the Overseas Teachers Association and the Department of Defense Committee recommend various means for achieving this in their respective reports.

Thank you for your interest in helping our Service children overseas. It has been a great pleasure to me personally to have a part in educating them. The children themselves have been the greatest factor in keeping me in schools abroad these nine years. They, too, are future American citizens and deserve good schooling wherever they may be.

Maud-Ellen Zimmerman

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of the Treasury—Robert B. Anderson
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

TEMPORARY advancements in rank went to four Regular officers, effective from 4 September.

They are:

To Lieutenant Commander—Stephen Varanko.

To Lieutenant—Jack A. Howell and George J. Weidner.

To Lieutenant (jg)—Domenic A. Calichic.

At the same time, Headquarters named Chief Boatswain John S. Cameron, jr., for promotion to Chief Warrant, W-3. His rank will date from the execution of an oath of office.

Appointments

Coast Guard Headquarters has appointed Boatswains Norval E. Cosby and James V. Dixon to warrant officer, W-1.

Their new assignments, conditional upon acceptance of the appointments, are: Bosn. Cosby from the Primrose to the Salvia, and Bosn. Dixon from the Base at Alameda to the Clover.

Extended Duty Rule

Headquarters calls the attention of responsible officers to the fact that Reservists recalled to active duty may not be issued active duty agreements until they have served six months following the date of first reporting.

Commanding Officers, Headquarters says, are to familiarize themselves with the provisions of Personnel Instruction 13-57.

In some instances, the regulations have not been complied with. There have been two cases, Headquarters reports, in which agreements were entered into before a letter of application had been submitted to the Commandant for approval. At the same time, some reporting seniors have failed to include in their endorsements, comments on the suitability of applicants.

Col. Goode Writes On Soldiers' Home

"It is thus shown that the Treasury became possessed of $111,791.19 without any claim whatever," wrote Maj. Gen. Winfield Scott in 1849.

This was but another salvo in the General's long fight for the establishment of an Army Asylum, later to be known as the U. S. Soldiers' Home in Washington, D. C. It came after 22 years of fruitless attempts to establish a haven for old or disabled Army enlisted personnel.

The sum to which General Scott alluded was a contribution in lieu of pillage made by Mexico City to the victorious U. S. troops the previous year. Earmarked for the establishment of the Army Asylum, it had been sequestered to the Treasury.

But the General's bold support and initiative on behalf of the cause was not without effect. With the help of Senator Jefferson Davis, the Asylum was established by Act of Congress in 1851.

The history of the Asylum, from the time it was conceived to the present, is warmly and sympathetically told by Col. Paul R. Goode, USA-Ret., Deputy Governor of the Soldiers' Home, in his newly published work, "The United States Soldiers' Home."

Privately published, the book is being distributed without cost to Service libraries and a limited number of newspapers throughout the country. No copies of the present edition are for sale.

Army Promotions

From first page—

Department of Defense, and personnel targets are made firm.

The Army now is under orders to drop to 950,000 men by 31 December, but there is talk that the budget pinch may force a further reduction.

At the present, personnel officials are proceeding with promotion plans that were approved by Congress, with about a 10 per cent slowdown forecast.

The Army advised Congress that it planned to promote 50 to general officer, 435 to colonel, 1579 to lieutenant colonel, 4594 to major and 5534 to captain.

It was reported that the present eligibility list for temporary major probably will be exhausted in January or February.

Late word this week was that there would be no temporary promotions in September.

During August, two-thirds of the class of '45 at the U. S. Military Academy was advanced to temporary major. It had been thought the remaining increment would be advanced in September.

A board to select a new list of captains for temporary promotion to major is slated to meet in October. There had been some talk of a delay in convening this board, but Army authorities said this week that the board likely will begin its work next month.

New IG Named At Riley

Lt. Col. Howard N. Brandenhoff, has assumed new duties as Inspector General of Ft. Riley, Kans., and the 1st Infantry Division.

He has been a member of the Ft. Riley Headquarters staff since June, 1956, as Operations, Plans and Training Executive Officer.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

RESERVE AWARD CERTIFICATE and Pennant presented by the Defense Department to the Household Finance Corporation for its cooperation with the Armed Forces Reserve Program is displayed by (left to right) Capt. Otto A. Scherini, USN, Commanding Officer of the Naval Reserve Training Center, Chicago; Brig. Gen. Hiram D. Ives, USA, Chief, Illinois Military District; Mr. H. E. MacDonald, President of Household Finance Corporation; Col. J. F. Cole, USMC, Marine Air Reserve Training, U. S. Naval Air Station, Glenview, Illinois, and Lt. Col. Jewell Matthews, Jr., USAF, 56th Fighter Group (Air Defense), O'Hara International Airport, Park Ridge, Illinois.

Builders of Defense

GIDDINGS & LEWIS MACHINE TOOL CO., of Fond Du Lac, Wisc., has begun performance tests on five axis profile milling machines for the Air Force, being procured under the Production Equipment Modernization and Replacement Program.

SYLVANIA ELECTRIC PRODUCTS is producing an audio beam power amplifier capable of maximum reliability in high ambient temperatures. Designed primarily for military equipment manufacturers, the tube is said to offer greater resistance to heat, shock, vibration, altitude and humidity than types heretofore available.

Brilliant fluorescent floodlights developed by Sylvania will be installed at Washington's National Airport as a result of flight tests at Andrews AFB, Md. They are said to illuminate uniformly the entire breadth of airport runways for landing planes.

KEUFFEL & ESSER CO. presented the U. S. Military Academy with the largest Leroy scribe and lettering template ever made. The scribe, five times the size of its original, measures 20 inches long, while the four-foot-long template gives letters 4 inches high.

COOK ELECTRIC CO. of Chicago, has received an Army Signal Corps contract to evaluate electronic components and prepare military specifications on new products. Work will be performed at the company's Technological Center at Morton Grove, Ill.

REPUBLIC AVIATION has installed electronic equipment that "looks through" steel, aluminum and titanium for internal flaws before these metals are used in building supersonic Thundercraft for the Air Force. The installation comprises an ultrasonic immersion tank with mechanized search-unit positioning equipment, electronic "flaw detection" equipment and a bridge crane for material handling.

ATLANTIC RESEARCH CORP. of Alexandria, Va., will add a new solid propellant rocket motor to the company's line of technological instruments and devices. Believed to be the smallest solid propellant rocket motor commercially available, the 0.6-pound PET (Propulsion, Experimental Test) motor is only 1.5 inches in diameter and 4.75 inches long.

BOSTROM RESEARCH LABORATORIES will measure human reaction to vibration up to the so-called "Intolerable" limits for the Office of the Army Surgeon General.

RYAN AERONAUTICAL COMPANY'S Q-2 "Firebee" jet target drone has flown its 300th research and development mission at the Holloman Air Development Center, N. M. Chief aim of the program is to "fly the drone faster, higher, and make it more reliable as a suitable target for missile testing."

Commercial Travel Favored By AF Regs

Commercial transportation is the preferred method of military travel when economical and advantageous to the government, according to AFR 77-9. Privately owned vehicles may also be used under specific circumstances.

The regulation states that it is Air Force policy to discontinue using military vehicles if private commercial facilities can be economically employed.

UNSATISFACTORY CONDITIONS at contractors' plants are the subject of 175-6, which tells the method by which they should be reported to AMC by Air Force auditors.

RAILWAY EQUIPMENT will not be acquired for military ownership unless it meets the strict criteria prescribed in AFR 67-65.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT budgeting and funding procedures are considered in HOI 80-4.

LATERAL CLEARANCES for fixed and movable objects on airfields are established by AFR 86-1.

MEDICAL CARE authorizations are changed in AFR 160-73A.

COMPROMISED EQUIPMENT must be reported in accordance with AFR 200-16. The regulation states that aircraft or equipment transferred or loaned to a foreign government by mutual agreement is not to be included in the reports.

NON-APPROPRIATED FUNDS are considered in AFR 176-1.

AF SUBSISTENCE PROGRAM responsibilities are outlined in AFR 145-1.

LAUNDRY AND DRY CLEANING operations are dealt with in two recently issued regulations. AFR 148-8 sets forth cost survey procedures for AF laundries and dry cleaning plants. Authorized patrons of these facilities are listed in AFR 148-9.

THE E. INGRAHAM CO. has announced development of a miniature D. C. elapsed time indicator for military airborne applications. Production plans are indefinite pending approval of the basic unit by military agencies.

STILLMAN RUBBER CO. of Culver City, Calif., has made available diaphragm seals for aircraft, missiles and rockets. They are made from popular fabrics such as Nylon, Dacron and Fiberglass.

BEECH AIRCRAFT CORP. will play host to Capt. Donald H. Jersey, USA, during a one year tour with the firm to study company procedures. Captain Jersey, of the Transportation School, Ft. Eustis, Va., will train under the Army Industrial Mobilization Training Program.

TELE-DYNAMICS, INC., is now occupying new plant facilities at 5000 Parkside Ave., Philadelphia. The new plant is equipped for research, development, engineering and production of electronics equipment.

APPOINTMENTS

RENNER, INC., technical and industrial consultants, has appointed John E. Scoby as Contract Negotiator and Field Sales Representative for its Technical Arts Division. Prior to joining the Renner firm, Mr. Scoby was Chief of the Prime Maintenance Support Division at Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, Ga.

GENERAL ELECTRIC has appointed John B. Montgomery, former Commanding General of the Eighth Air Force, to be General Manager of its Aircraft Gas Turbine Division with headquarters in Evanston, Ill. He had been with American Airlines before joining GE earlier this year as General Manager of the Production Engine Department at Evanston.

REPUBLIC SUPPLY CO. OF CALIFORNIA has elected Thomas P. Pike, former Assistant Secretary of Defense and Special assistant to President Eisenhower, as a Director.

BROOKINGS INSTITUTION has appointed Dr. Ralph J. Watkins as its director of economic studies. A former special consultant to the Secretary of the Army, Dr. Watkins will be responsible for guiding 17 economic and business problems now in progress.

STEWART-WARNER ELECTRONICS has announced the appointment of Marvin Hobbs as its director of marketing. During the Korean fighting, he served as Director of the Electronics Division of the Munitions Board.

GENERAL ELECTRIC has named Jack S. Parker, Vice-President and General Manager of its Aircraft Gas Turbine Division, as Vice-President for Public and Employee Relations. In 1952, Mr. Parker was Operations Manager of the Aircraft Nuclear Propulsion Project at Evandale.

Thor IRBM Begins "Captive" Firings

The Air Force "Thor" intermediate range ballistic missile soon will begin a series of captive test firings by Douglas Aircraft Company at a new site near Sacramento, Calif.

Company officials emphasized that the firings, which are scheduled to get underway in a matter of weeks, will not consist of launchings from the Sacramento site.

In a captive firing, it was explained, the missile is held firmly in a superstructure while the engine and all other components go through a complete firing cycle. Purpose of the test is to observe how each component performs without actually expending a missile.

The Air Force Ballistic Missile Division disclosed that the Sacramento site is part of a total investment of over $450 million in facilities which back up the Air Force's ballistic missile program.

THOMAS A. EDISON INDUSTRIES has announced the appointment of William H. Balentine as manager of its Instrument Division. A WWII Navy Commander, Balentine is the Guided Missile instructor for the Naval Reserve Officer's School, Elizabeth, N. J.

ROCHESTER MFG. CO. has employed Norman Willard to work in the sales and engineering areas of its new Lindsay high pressure gauges for aircraft and missiles. He is the former Chief of the Small Arms Division of Rochester, N. Y. Ordnance District.

DEFENSE PRODUCTS GROUP of the American Machine and Foundry Co. has appointed Edward R. Corvey as Assistant Group Executive for Business Operations.

STROMBERG CARLSON DIVISION of General Dynamics Corporation has named Clarence A. Wetherill as Engineering Staff Specialist at its San Diego, Calif., operations. He had formerly been in charge of specialized radar projects at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Military Assistance Program Saves Billions, Secy. Sprague Tells Association

It would be "folly" to cut back on the Military Assistance Program "simply because our allies have thus far succeeded in holding the Communist menace in check," declares Mansfield D. Sprague, Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs.

Mr. Sprague

Taking sharp issue with critics of the Mutual Aid Program, he pointed to the growing strength of the Soviet bloc and the accomplishments of our allies.

"The Soviet Union," he told a gathering of the National Security Industrial Association, at the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C., on 12 September, has the largest land Army in the world (175 ground divisions), and it is constantly being improved in quality and capability. Her Navy, the second largest in the world, includes the largest peacetime submarine force in history. Russia's air fleet (about 100,000 planes) is rapidly growing in size and effectiveness, and she also has an ever-increasing nuclear capability."

The Communist satellite nations are sizeable (about 80 divisions), he observed. "Communist China, with Soviet help, has developed a powerful and well equipped military machine of 200 divisions and 2,000 planes."

"It is clear," the Secretary emphasized, "that they are prepared to translate this military power into overt aggression at any time they believe it serves their purposes to do so."

He told his audience that the $55 billion expended on the Military Assistance Program has reduced overall expenses of the United States.

As an example, he said, it costs $3,511 annually, excluding weapons, equipment and transportation, to make an American soldier an effective fighting man in any part of the world. By contrast, the cost to pay, house, feed and clothe a French soldier is $1,440; a Pakistani, $485; a Nationalist Chinese, $142; and a Turk, $105.

"The assistance we give to help our allies meet some of these expenses is a small price indeed for the increase in free world strength which has resulted," Secretary Sprague stated.

An indication of the progress made under the program can be estimated by a comparison of what the free nations had at the start of the plan in 1950 and what they now have, the Secretary said.

"In 1950, our allies' active ground forces numbered about three and a half million men, mostly ill-trained and poorly-equipped. In their naval forces were fewer than 1,000 combatant vessels. Their air forces were equipped with about 11,500 aircraft, of which fewer than 500 were jets."

"By the end of 1956, there were 4.8 million men in the ground forces of our allies—an increase of 37 per cent. In their navies were over 2,300 combatant vessels, an increase of 139 per cent. Their air forces were equipped with over 12,000 conventional aircraft, and the number of jet aircraft has increased to nearly 11,000—22 times as many as they had in 1950."

In addition, Secretary Sprague said, "the men are better trained and organized than the troops of 1950 were, and their morale is at a much higher level. They have better equipment and support facilities. Their air forces have many more and better airfields and improved communications and early warning systems."

They Keep Busy

COL. WILLIAM J. B. CLINE, USA-Ret., of 1337 Pollard Drive, S. W., Atlanta, Ga., Armed Forces liaison representative of the Coffee Brewing Institute, Inc., demonstrates the right way to prepare coffee during a coffee clinic for food service personnel at Ft. Benning. Colonel Cline gave a series of lectures and demonstrations to approximately 250 members of the Third U.S. Army Food Service School, mess stewards, mess officers and other food personnel groups.

MAJ. GEN. EMMET J. BEAN, USA-Ret., former Commander of the Finance Center at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., has affiliated with the Indianapolis Office of the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane. General and Mrs. Bean have taken up residence at 1501 East 38th Street, Indianapolis. He will be manager of the firm's Investment Department at Indianapolis.

BRIG. GEN. JAMES H. BANVILLE, USA-Ret., Secretary of the Retired Officers Association, was presented the Legion of Merit by Assistant Army Secretary Hugh M. Milton II, at a Pentagon ceremony earlier this month. He resides in Arlington, Va.

CAPT. WILFRED B. GOULETT, USN-Ret., will assume the post of Executive Vice-President of the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association 1 October. LCDR. RAYMOND E. MEYERS, USN-Ret., Radio Operations Manager for Lockheed Aircraft, Burbank, Calif., was elected Regional Vice President for the West Coast. RADM. FREDERICK R. FURTH, USN-Ret., Director of Research and Engineering for the International Telephone and Telegraph Co., is National President of the AFCEA.

COL. FRED L. THORPE, USA-Ret., former IG at the Seattle Army Terminal, is an engineer with the Logistic Depot of the Pilotless Aircraft Division of Boeing in Seattle, Wash. He resides with his wife on Vashon Island, Wash.

M/SGT. THEODORE L. SHIVIK, USAF-RET., has accepted a civilian position as assistant to his former boss, Lt. Col. D. E. DeFord, Officer in Charge of the Communications and Electronics at Headquarters, 3025th Drone Group, Eglin AFB, Fla.

They End Careers

BRIG. GEN. EDWARD J. TRACEY, USAF, Air Materiel Command Surgeon, Wright Patterson AFB, Ohio, has retired after more than 28 years service. He is succeeded in the AMC post by Brig. Gen. Wilford F. Hall, USAF.

BRIG. GEN. J. HARRY LABRUM, USAF, prominent Philadelphia attorney, has ended military service with a garrison review at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., after 15 years active duty and Reserve service.

COL. WILLIAM C. BENTLEY, USAF, has retired at Dreux AB, France, after more than 29 years' service. He plans a six-month tour of Europe with Mrs. Bentley before returning to the States.

CAPT. JAMES L. PURCELL, Commanding Officer, U. S. Naval Dental Clinic, Philadelphia Naval Base, will retire 1 October after more than 30 years service.

Army Program Seeks Management Gains

The Army has told details of its Management Improvement Program in newly issued Pamphlet No. 20-344.

"The one central and underlying objective of the management improvement efforts," says the Army, "is to develop better, more economical, and faster ways of doing the work of the Army in accomplishing its mission."

The Pamphlet adds: "Stated in another way, the objective is to develop ways to increase the combat effectiveness of the Army by a more efficient and effective use of its resources."

The Army stresses that it's not enough to propose improvements; action is necessary. "Merely talking about some improvements, or being timid about making some desirable change, does not bring about improvements. There must be action."

The Army comments that a "progressive and forward looking attitude" is created "by assuring that personnel who initiate improvements are accorded appropriate recognition and awards."

New Stainless Steel Will Help Beat Thermal Barrier

A stainless steel developed by Armco Steel Corporation of Middletown, Ohio, will enable future aircraft and missiles to withstand temperatures of 1,000 degrees at Mach 4 speeds of over 2,700 mph.

The new low-cost aircraft material, to be used mainly for skins and major structural parts, is known as Armco PH 15-7 Mo. It is the latest in a series of new steels developed by the Armco company for advanced aircraft uses.

The new steel is described by R. L. Gray, Armco president, as providing "the best combination of characteristics for aircraft and missiles flying up to 2,700 miles an hour of any metal available today." In addition to its low cost, Mr. Gray said, the new steel can be produced in volume, easily fabricated and has great corrosion resistance.

The unofficial speed record holder, the Bell X-2 rocket plane, encountered a scorching 700 degrees at 2,260 miles per hour.

Within the last five years, aircraft and missiles have become the second largest consumers of stainless steel, according to Mr. Gray. Approximately $75 million worth of stainless steel went into aircraft and missiles in 1956.

"Although the production pattern of air weapons is difficult to predict right now, our market analysts are convinced that within the next five years the aircraft and missile industry can become the top user of stainless steel, taking some $200 million worth annually."

Col. John F. Corley Directs Communications Dept.

Col. John F. Corley has assumed duties as Director of the Army Infantry School's Communications Department at Ft. Benning, Ga.

For his actions during WWII, Colonel Corley won the DSC, Silver Star with four Oak Leaf Clusters, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Soldier's Medal and French Croix de Guerre with Star.

In Korea where he commanded the 24th Regiment, 25th Infantry Division in 1950, he fought through three major campaigns. Again he was awarded the DSC, Silver Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and Legion of Merit.

He succeeds Col. Rollin B. Durbin, assigned to the Republic of Vietnam.

The new director comes to Benning from Seventh Army headquarters in Stuttgart, Germany, where he has served as G-1, since 1954.

Colonel Corley is married to the former Mary Elizabeth Buckley of Cambridge, Mass. They have seven children, John, 12; Jimmy, 10; Robert and Mary, 9; Ellen, 7; Michael, 3, and Carol Ann, 2.

Signal Course Begins With Atomic Program

A readjustment in the course program will give students at the Signal Officer Advanced Course, Ft. Monmouth, N. J., instruction in the use of communications in atomic and missile warfare.

Over 100 students, ranging from lieutenant to lieutenant commander, began class under the new program 16 Sept.

The course is the highest branch training offered by the Signal Corps.

Army Regs. Provide School Transport

School transportation rules for military dependents in the U. S., Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Wake Island and the Virgin Islands are told in AR 58-30.

The regulation cites DA policy that dependent children are entitled to an adequate education, including necessary transportation to and from school.

CRYPTOMATTER SECURITY regulations for both Army and non-Army elements are set forth in AR 380-40. It is desirable, says the 91 page pamphlet, that commanders of organizations holding cryptomatter requiring a crypto clearance be cleared for access to such matter.

QM REQUISITION processing points have been changed for many items in Cir 725-8, effective 1 Oct.

RESERVE

PHYSICIANS liable for military service under the UMTS Act may apply for and receive Reserve commissions while undergoing internship, says AR 135-105.

DENTAL STUDENTS liable for military service under the UMTS Act and who are not members of a military student training program, may apply for reserve commissions during their senior year of dental school and be commissioned upon graduation, according to AR 135-106.

PERSONNEL

PHYSICAL EVALUATION for separation or retention is considered in AR 635-40B.

ARMY PERSONNEL SURVEYS, utilizing DA Form 1558-53, will not include male nurses, male Army medical specialists or any female personnel, states Cir. 600-7.

MENTAL QUALIFICATIONS for enlistment in the Army Reserve or Army National Guard will be determined by administering AFQT-3 and -4, instead of the previously used AFQT-1 and -2. Detailed in Cir 611-8, the change becomes effective upon receipt of the necessary materials.

Fill Logistic Billets

COL. ALFRED M. KOSTER, USA, is serving as Deputy to the G-4, at First Army Headquarters, Governors Island, N. Y. His previous assignment was as Executive Officer to the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Logistics.

LT. COL. ALBERT M. OLSEN, USA, recently at Ft. Wayne, Mich., is the new Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, at Ft. Riley, Kans. With the Colonel at his new post are his wife, Florence, and son, Charles Terry. His daughter, Patricia, is attending the University of Kansas at Lawrence.

LT. COL. ANDREW M. DUNN, USA, former commanding officer of Wurzburg Subarea in Germany, is now Assistant Post Logistics and Supply Officer at Ft. Meade, Md. With his wife and two sons he makes his home at Meade Heights, Md.

X-17 Rocket Tours U. S.

The giant Lockheed X-17 rocket, fastest instrumented missile ever flown by the United States, has begun a nationwide tour. It is the first ballistic vehicle to be exhibited across the country.

Premier showing was at the Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield, Mass., attended by high ranking military and civilian officials.

Goodyear Develops Real Foot-Thumper

A new, foot-thumping warning device to replace automatic anti-skid systems has been developed by the Aviation Products Division of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

The system automatically senses an impending skid and warns the pilot to take corrective action by rapidly tapping the bottom of his foot with a plunger projecting through a hole in the brake pedal. The plunger continues its staccato tapping until the pilot eases brake pressure sufficiently to allow the affected wheel to rotate again.

Advantage of the new device, Goodyear officials state, is that it enables the pilot to keep full control of the plane in what was formerly a "blind area" of trouble. It is expected to reduce blow-outs and flat-spotting caused by undetected skids.

LOCKHEED AIRCRAFT CORP. will extend production of T-33 jet trainers into 1959 under a new $11 million Air Force contract. The contract marks the 14th successive purchase of the T-33. Lockheed also has received a $35 million contract to supply 12 C-130 Hercules propjet transports to the Royal Australian Air Force.

CANOGA CORP. of Van Nuys, Calif., was awarded a $1,087,458 contract to supply four of its model 7240 radar systems to the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics. The system is designed to track missiles in flight.

WYLE MFG. CORP. of El Segundo, Calif., has announced availability of the "Wyle Hydrashaker," a new vibration excitation system capable of providing previously unattainable combinations of force, acceleration and frequency. Details about the new equipment were released at a Defense Department sponsored symposium at the Massachusetts Inst. of Technology.

FAIRCHILD AIRCRAFT DIVISION has completed an initial research program on "jet wing" aircraft. The project was sponsored by the Office of Naval Research. Joint sponsorship of a more advanced testing and development program now has been undertaken by ONR and the Army's Transportation, Research and Engineering Command.

Seattle Airmail Center Speeds Mail To Far East

Speeding personal mail from the U. S. to the 67 Air Force and Army Post Offices in the Far East is the goal of a new airmail postal center dedicated 13 Sept. at the Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, Wash.

For the past two years, 84 per cent of all personal airmail for APOs with San Francisco addresses has been flown overseas from the Seattle airport.

This mail is flown daily over the "great circle" route via Alaska and the Aleutian Chain to Japan. Airmail gets to the Far East faster and cheaper on the "circle" route. Airmail to APOs in Hawaii still is flown from San Francisco.

Airmail slated for Far East APOs is routed directly to Seattle from postal regions throughout the U. S. Some send all their Far East airmail to Seattle and others just send the mail which will reach Seattle in time to go out that evening, with the balance going to San Francisco for flights from there.

This system worked so well that the Post Office set up a postal center at the Seattle Airport to get the airmail on its way even faster. Most of its traffic is APO airmail.

Since the center opened in mid-July airmail arriving at the airport has been sorted and made ready there for overseas instead of being taken downtown for processing and returned. This shortstoping has cut several hours from the process.

Airmail for Far East APOs reaching the airport by 6 p. m. can be sorted, bundled and sacked by 9 p. m., in time to be loaded aboard a Northwest Airlines airplane an hour before its 10 p. m. take-off for the Far East via the "circle" route.

USAF Opens Service Football Season; All Four Academies Play Next Week

The Air Force Academy kicks off the 1957 Service football season against UCLA on 20 Sept., and Navy opens against Boston on 21 Sept.

Marines Choose Seven Colonels For Stars

From first page—

Zone, which extended from lineal position 96 through 136.

The board dropped one name below the zone to pick up Col. Leonard F. Chapman, jr., who served in the Army before becoming a Leatherneck.

Five of the selectees have attended the U. S. Naval Academy. Col. Lewis J. Fields is a former enlisted Marine.

The officers named this year are younger than those named last year. The average age of officers chosen by the Fiscal Year 1957 board was slightly over 47. This year, however, the average age of the brigadier-designees is 45.7. There is a five year age spread between the youngest and oldest man chosen. The youngest is Col. Robert E. Cushman, who will be 43 in December. The oldest is Colonel Fields, who will be 48 next month. Colonel Cushman holds the Navy Cross for heroic action in leading a battalion of Marines during the recapture of Guam in 1944.

The selectees have from 21 to 23 years of service in the Corps. Two became Marines in 1934, four in 1935 and one in 1936.

Four of the officers named from the zone have dates of rank as colonels from 1949 and one from 1950. The officer named from below the zone has been serving in grade since 1950, while the lone SDO was a colonel's date of rank from 1951.

Immediate promotions are not in prospect for the designees since the Marine Corps has not yet exhausted the list of selectees picked last year. Two officers, named by the Fiscal Year 1957 board, will have to be advanced before promotions are given to Fiscal Year 1958 selectees.

Headquarters does not anticipate vacancies during the next several months.

The names and duty assignments of the designees are listed lineally:

Col. John P. Conlon, 2d Marine Air Wing, Cherry Point, N. C.

Col. Fank S. Tharin, Headquarters, Aircraft Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, Norfolk, Va.

Col. Robert E. Cushman, Military Aide to Vice-President Richard M. Nixon.

Col. Richard G. Weede, 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Col. Lewis J. Fields, Headquarters, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, Norfolk, Va.

Col. Leonard F. Chapman, jr., Commanding Officer, Marine Barracks, 8th Eye Streets, Washington, D. C.

Col. Paul R. Tyler, enroute to the Department of the Pacific, for duty with the Supply Department at Marine Corps Headquarters.

*Position abolished 30 June 1953.

Unification Spending— $11 To $43 Billion

Unification was launched at a time when Congress voted $9.7 billion in new obligatory authority for the Services, and spending was at a rate of $11 billion per year.

This soared to NOA of $60.4 billion in Fiscal Year 1952 and spending of $43.7 billion.

The fiscal story for military functions (in millions of dollars):

FY	NOA	Spending
1948	9,782	11,094
1949	13,950	11,994
1950	13,169	11,887
1951	48,182	19,772
1952	60,436	38,972
1953	47,041	43,711
1954	34,474	40,336
1955	29,728	35,533
1956	33,937	35,791
1957	36,831	38,428

Col Naimark Arrives at Ft Sam
